CREDIT HOURS: 1

PREREQUISITES: None, accepted into the Honors program as an undergraduate student

COURSE DESCRIPTION:

Drug dependence & addiction may often seem far away unless it gets personal and affects somebody close by. We will be reading the books “Beautiful Boy: A Father’s Journey through his Son’s Addiction” and “Methland: The Death and Life of an American Small Town”, discussing the various aspects of how drug addiction affects the individual, their loved ones, friends, and society. Some of the topics will include the underlying biological mechanisms of addiction, the impact of addiction on society, treatment approaches, with a major part spend on sharing our views on what can be done moving forward to find solutions. This class is taught entirely online over a 12-week period using Canvas, Zoom, and VoiceThread.

JUSTIFICATION:

Addiction is a misnomer for a serious disorder with many symptoms that can be devastating, at worst leading to the death of the person directly affected by it. In the US the rate of substance use disorders is estimated to be directly affecting 5% of the population but only about 10% actually seek treatment and 40-60% of those who undergo treatment relapse within a year.

David Sheff is an award-winning writer and journalist for the New York Times and chronicled in his book the incredible personal, heartbreaking, but also sobering story of his son’s struggle with addiction. The book follows the father, his thoughts, his struggles, his frustrations, over the years as he lives through the ups and downs of helping his son deal with the disorder while at the same time having to deal with the effects it has on him and the rest of the family. This personal account is especially relevant given the ongoing public discussion of the “war on drugs”, the “opioid crisis”, and how we as a society and as individuals should respond to people with a substance use disorder.

Nick Reding’s books have made the bestseller lists of the New York Times and Harper’s but this book chronicles a personal journey back to the roots of the American heartlands. Like thousands of rural communities across the country, Oelwein, Iowa, has been debilitated by the consolidation of the agricultural industry, a depressed local economy, and an out-migration of people to urban centers. Now an incredibly cheap, long-lasting, and highly effective drug has taken its hold. Methland provides an intimate look at one town’s struggle against this scourge, and a broader, vital perspective on an American way of life under threat.

Both books complement each other in describing drug dependence and addiction from both a personal and a community perspective. Parallels to the ongoing drug epidemic can help learners to relate to their respective field of study and prepare for the various aspects of how substance use does influence the individual and their surroundings.

The course is intended to meet once a week online through a Canvas course via Zoom with assigned reading being completed prior to each meeting. In addition to the assigned book reading, the instructor will provide information from other resources such as the underlying neurochemical concepts of addiction, current treatment approaches in the US and other countries, and ask other UF professors from the Colleges of Pharmacy and Medicine to join for Q&A sessions.

Preparation guidelines & grading rubric for VoiceThread presentation

Guideline for presentation

Please prepare your presentation as a PowerPoint using any format you wish. It should have a title slide (including your name, the semester, and course), several slides covering relevant information related to your topic, and at the end a slide with references.

The topic you choose needs to be related to the book and the course, e.g. a specific substance use disorder, how a state is dealing with substance dependence, what the science is saying about a specific substance use disorder, etc. You will need to do some research beyond the book and our weekly meetings in order to complete the presentation – so please start at least 2 weeks ahead of the deadline for the VoiceThread presentation.

Your presentation cannot include animations or transitions between slides since they will not show up when you upload it to the VoiceThread server. Once you have completed the PowerPoint presentation slides, please save the slides as a PDF document. This ensures that any figures and the text on each slide are showing up correctly.

When you go to VoiceThread please make sure to upload your presentation in the PDF format and then narrate each slide separately using your microphone, webcam, or mobile phone (if you want to use the VoiceThread app). After you have narrated all slides, you can share the VoiceThread presentation link to the discussion board in the Canvas course.

Grading rubric

The following rubric will be used when grading the VoiceThread presentation:

Criteria	Complete (6 points)	Incomplete (3 points)	Absent (0 points)
Relation to book	Relation of topic to book is clearly explained in the presentation with mention of contextual references (e.g. characters, locations, time periods, etc.)	Relation of topic to book is explained but no mention of contextual references is provided (e.g. characters, locations, time periods, etc.)	Relation of topic to book is not explained; no mention of contextual references
Content/topic	Content is well streamlined and logically arranged; each slide is related to the topic through the content presentation	Content is streamlined but not presented in a logical manner; slides are not related to the topic	Content is not streamlined or organized in a logical manner; slides are off-topic
Flow	Transition between slides is well done; complexity builds throughout the presentation; conclusions are presented	Transition between slides is abrupt; complexity is irregular through the presentation; conclusions are incomplete	No transitions between slides; conclusions are missing
Oral presentation	Clear voice; not too slow or too fast; keep presentation within 9-11 minutes	Voice is irregular or hard to understand; either too hurried or very slow pace; presentation shorter than 9 or longer than 11 minutes	No voice recording; presentation is shorter than 5 minutes or longer than 15 minutes
Format	Text does not contain spelling errors; text can be read, is not too small; figures have good resolution; references are complete and can be followed	Text contains no more than 5 spelling errors; text is small or cannot be read well on some slides; some figures have poor resolution; references are incomplete or cannot be followed	Text has more than 5 spelling errors; text is not legible without magnification on more than one slide; more than 3 figures have poor resolution; references are incomplete or missing
