There is no book quite like A. B. Yehoshua’s "Mr. Mani" (1989). First of all, it is told backwards. The novel which spans five generations of one family begins in the relatively recent present and proceeds back through the centuries, "ending" in 1799. If that’s not experimental enough, the novel is also written in the form of one-sided conversations, meaning, the reader gets to read only one voice (imagine listening to someone talking on the phone...) and must complete the dialogue in their head.

In this course we will unpack Yehoshua’s innovative, yet challenging novel. We will open the semester by thinking about post-modern art and how the process of writing and reading had changed in the 20th century. We will then delve into the book’s "conversations" and hear about the trials and tribulations of the Mani family through the ages. In our discussions, we will learn about the history and fate of the Jewish people in exile, about Jewish identity, the state of Israel, and the conflict in the Middle East. We will also raise more personal questions about the structure of one’s identity: how do we define and present ourselves in relation to religion, race, ethnicity, nationality, and mainstream culture? How do external forces such as community, family, and prescribed notions of destiny, affect our lives and free will?

This (Un)Common Reads course will mark a one year anniversary of Yehoshua’s passing. The celebrated novelist, essayist and playwright was described by the New York Times as the “Israeli Faulkner.” Students will get to familiarize themselves with Yehoshua’s literary inspiration, and his own philosophical reflections about identity and the state through supplemental readings and discussions.
Course Objectives:

- Students will become familiar with the history of the Jewish people, in Israel and the diaspora.
- Students will explore notions of immigration, diasporas, exile, displacement, and the meaning of homelands or motherlands.
- Students will write and present their own findings in writing and through an experiential project that apply their family history to express their own backgrounds and realities.

In-Class Recordings

Students are allowed to record video or audio of class lectures. However, the purposes for which these recordings may be used are strictly controlled. The only allowable purposes are (1) for personal educational use, (2) in connection with a complaint to the university, or (3) as evidence in, or in preparation for, a criminal or civil proceeding. All other purposes are prohibited. Specifically, students may not publish recorded lectures without the written consent of the instructor.

A “class lecture” is an educational presentation intended to inform or teach enrolled students about a particular subject, including any instructor-led discussions that form part of the presentation, and delivered by any instructor hired or appointed by the University, or by a guest instructor, as part of a University of Florida course. A class lecture does not include lab sessions, student presentations, clinical presentations such as patient history, academic exercises involving solely student participation, assessments (quizzes, tests, exams), field trips, private conversations between students in the class or between a student and the faculty or lecturer during a class session.

Publication without permission of the instructor is prohibited. To “publish” means to share, transmit, circulate, distribute, or provide access to a recording, regardless of format or medium, to another person (or persons), including but not limited to another student within the same class section. Additionally, a recording, or transcript of a recording, is considered published if it is posted on or uploaded to, in whole or in part, any media platform, including but not limited to social media, book, magazine, newspaper, leaflet, or third party note/tutoring services. A student who publishes a recording without written consent may be subject to a civil cause of action instituted by a person injured by the publication and/or discipline under UF Regulation 4.040 Student Honor Code and Student Conduct Code.
